We will review recent approaches to the topic of the nature of phonological features and evaluate different theories about their interaction within the framework of Feature Geometry. From the perspective of Feature Geometry, we will take under scrutiny the role of the tongue root in phonological processes, feature [Advanced Tongue Root] ([ATR]) and the different hypotheses about the location of [ATR] in Feature Geometry, as well as, more broadly, the structure of the Place node. |                      |                     |     |     |     |
